A clean and organized closet can give you peace of mind and save you time and money, according to experts. However, we tend to clutter those closets with clothes that don't fit, linens, tax records and anything else we want out of sight.

"We wear about 80 percent of our clothes 20 percent of the time," says Tracy McCubbin, owner of dClutterfly in Los Angeles. When the clothes pile up, it reaches the point where you don't even want to open your closet door. According to Adele Mahan, owner of Fresh Start Transitions in Charlotte, North Carolina, that's when people give up on the closet and start dumping clothes on a chair, opening the rest of the home to clutter.

It makes actual dating lose its value

There is really no such thing as dating anymore. And if for some odd reason you are asked on a date, it is the most awkward and nerve-racking thing ever. Nowadays, it's more common for you to just "hang out" whenever it is convenient, and then one day (if it all works out), you are magically a couple, all without a single date.

DIFFERENT SHADE

The hidden coastline wonders

Ontario shores of Lake Huron stretch more than 300 kilometres from Sarnia to Tobermory. More than 25 beach communities and towns dot the coast, each with their own personality.

As a child, my two sisters and I spent our summers at the cottage for the annual summer “family beach day” on Lake Huron, one of the Great Lakes we can flee to in southern Ontario. I have sand-filled memories of sunny days, turquoise waters at the beaches of Port Elgin, Wainwright and Goderich, just three hours northwest of Toronto. Those days felt like they would never end – with epic sand castles

South Arcane Bay Beach

Trying to narrow down the best beaches in the world to only 20 incomparable strands wasn't easy. The corners of our amazing planet — from North America, where wide public beaches flank the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, to the Southern Hemisphere, where more intimate and exotic beaches await — has an embarrassment of beautiful beaches. That said, some are just a bit more memorable and more photogenic than others. Some are world famous (featured in a million movies and even a diet) while others are unsung gems. What unites them? That feeling of awe you get when you kick off your flip flops, throw down your beach towel and think, "No wonder."

THE HOOKUP

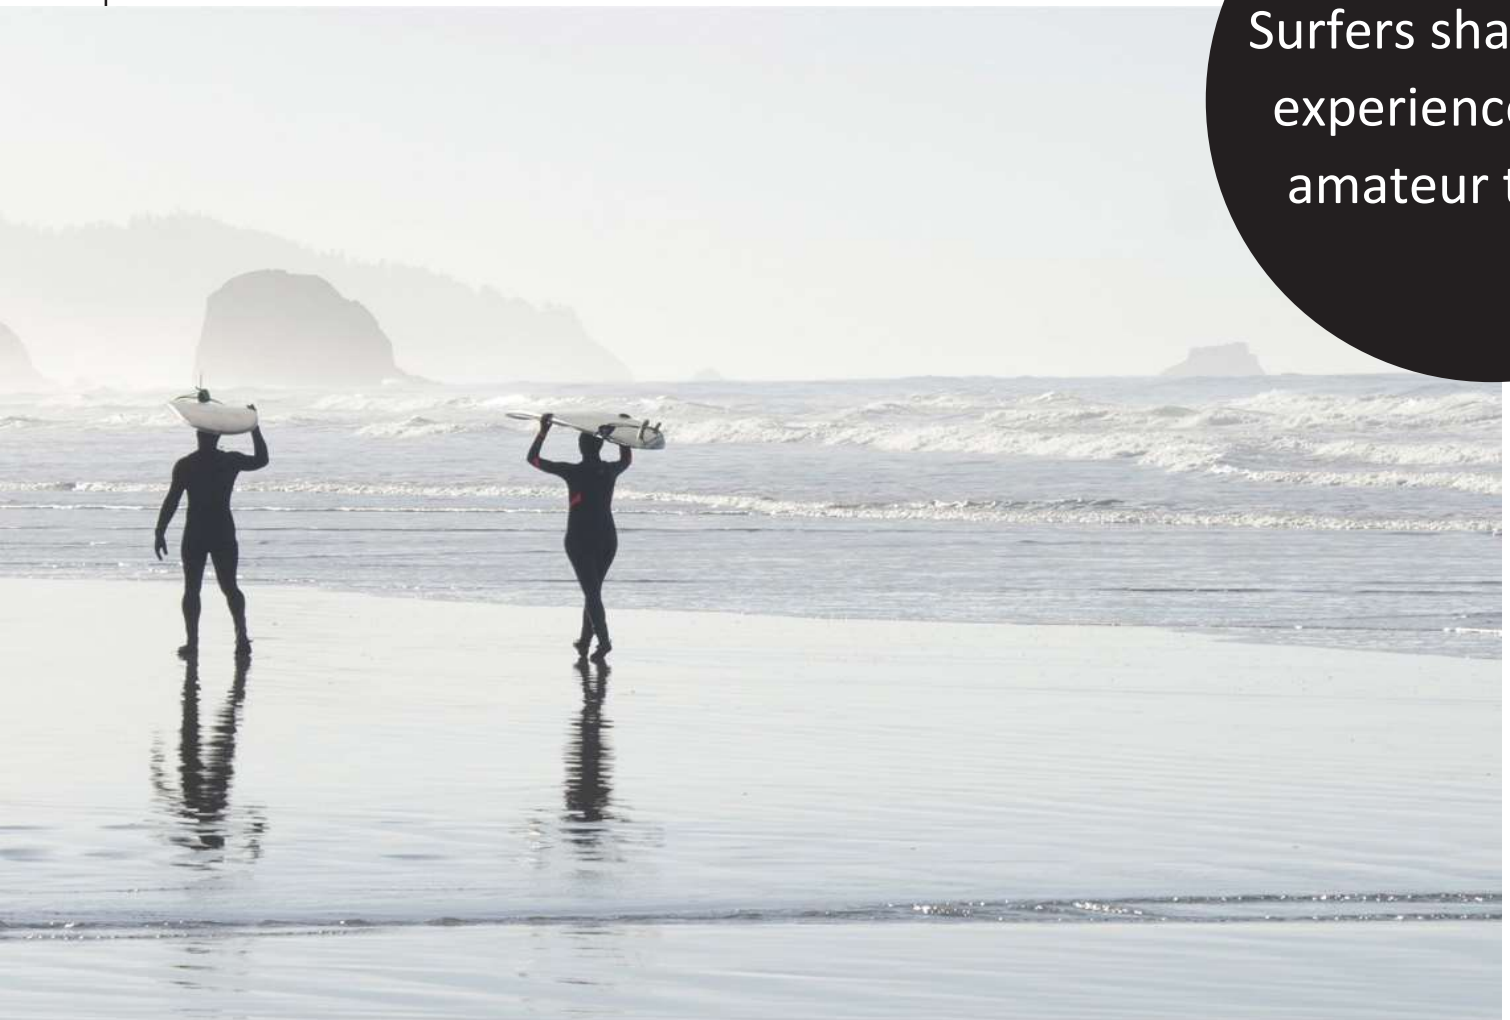

From one-night stands to “Netflix and Chill”

Scene: a college bar on a Friday night. On one side of the bar is Chelsea, a sophomore, and a group of friends, out drinking for a girl's night. After a few drinks, Chelsea will make a connection with a guy she runs into in her chem lab. They'll talk all night long. After a few drinks, they will make their way back to his place. Chelsea will wake up in his bed the next morning. She will be labeled a “slut” or a “whore” for hooking up with a guy that she isn't in a relationship with. Every generation has its own version of dating. In recent years, dating has taken a turn for the worse. In fact, dating almost feels non-

The “Hook-Up Culture” is great for some people. Serious relationships don't fit into every person's busy schedule. Perhaps, some people haven't found a person that they feel strongly enough about to commit to. Others find comfort in the stability of having a boyfriend or a girlfriend. Neither of these things is wrong – they're right for the people they're right for. When one person chooses to do with their life is none of your concern. The
